The most important society event of this evening will be a lecture by Miss Helen Keller at the hall-room of the Masonic Temple at half-after 8 o'clock under the direction of the Alumnae Association of the Virginia Randolph Elliott School. The lecture is given under the most fashionable patronage in town, and a large gathering of society will be present to hear Miss Keller speak. She will be accompanied by Mrs. Macey, who has been her companion and teacher since she was seven years old. Miss Keller is a national figure, and her appearance in Richmond is a matter of the greatest interest here.

Last night Miss Virginia Randolph Elliott was hostess at a reception at 11 North Laurel Street for Miss Keller. In the receiving line were the guests of honor, Mrs. Macey and the officers of the Alumnae Association. Only former students and a few of the well known writers of Richmond were invited to the reception, and no formal invitations were issued. Decorations were in palms and ferns and spring flowers.

At the Country Club. There will be the usual hop following dinner this evening at the Country Club of Virginia. Most of the dinner tables will be placed on the terrace and porches of the clubhouse, and the little tables will be set with pink honeysuckle and Dresden shaded candles.

Mrs. Swanson's Luncheon. Says the Washington Post of yesterday:

"Many of the women of the Senate circle were included among the several hundred guests entertained by Mrs. Claude A. Swanson Thursday at the buffet luncheon in honor of Mrs. Thomas R. Marshall. The home of Senator and Mrs. Swanson in R Street, was a bower of bloom, dogwood, mock orange and vases of snapdragon.

adorned the drawing-room, where the hostess received, assisted by Mrs. Marshall. Mrs. William J. Bryan, Mrs. Lundy M. Garrison and Mrs. Albert Sidney Burleson. Mrs. Swanson wore a charming gown of white lace draped with rose chiffon. The dining-room was decorated with dogwood and pink honeysuckle, and the long table was decorated with baskets of snapdragons and other spring flowers, while branches of wild honeysuckle, dogwood and other flowering plants were used generously about the drawing-rooms.

"Mrs. Swanson has as home guests for some days Mrs. Reilly Gordon and Miss Gordon, of New York, and Mrs. Douglas Gordon, of Baltimore, all of whom assisted her in the hospitality."

"She was further assisted by Mrs. Dent, Mrs. Thigpen, of Alabama; Mrs. W. L. Marshall, Mrs. Knapp, Mrs. Elbridge and Miss Marshall."

"Receiving with Mrs. Swanson and Mrs. Bryan were Mrs. Garrison and Mrs. Burleson, while the guests included Mrs. Thomas R. Marshall and women of the Senate, House and resident and official society."

MR. SIMON CELEBRATES HIS SEVENTY-THIRD BIRTHDAY

Asher Simon, who came to Richmond in 1865, and who has been actively in business here for forty-six years, celebrated his seventy-third birthday with a dinner party at the Jefferson Hotel last night. He is just as hale and hearty as he was twenty years ago. Mr. Simon is the only Richmond member of the National Tailors' Association, which will hold its next convention in this city in 1914, with delegates in attendance from all parts of the United States. "The wisest thing I ever did in my life was to locate in Richmond," said Mr. Simon last night. Mr. Simon was born in Germany, and he hopes to visit his birthplace this year.

COMMENCEMENT AT BRIDGEWATER.

Diplomas conferred on eight graduates of High School. [Special to The Times-Dispatch.] Crews, Va., May 9.--Commencement exercises of the Crews High School were held in the Baptist Church on Thursday night before an audience that more than filled the large auditorium and Sunday school room. Diplomas were conferred on eight graduates by the principal, Miss Fannie Dunn.

Dr. F. A. Millage, of the State Normal School, Farmville, made a most excellent address, urging industrial features in the school life.

Miss Geraldine Gerald won the medal offered by the Nottoway Chapter of the Daughters of the Confederacy for the best essay written by a high school pupil on "My Hero of the Confederacy." It was presented by Mrs. J. H. Hines, who insisted on the young women of to-day keeping alive the noble influences that actuated the women of the Confederacy.

In the graduating exercises proper Miss Alice Ruth Moore read the salutatory, Miss Rosa Chapman, the history and prophecy; Miss Annie Laurie Childress, the class poem; Miss Elsie Marie Herring, gifts; Miss Fannie Eunice Robertson, will, and Miss Eva May Bergman, the valedictory. Misses Gladys Ivy Sowers and Ella Walton Hammock completed the list of graduates.

COL. SYKES IS EXPERT IN FOREIGN AFFAIRS

Knowledge Secured Through Travel and Long Residence Abroad.

BY LA MARQUISE DE FONTENAY.

OLIVIER SIR MARK SYKES, who has just succeeded to the honor of knighthood, is an expert in foreign affairs in the House of Commons, and has sometimes been described as a second Sir Charles Dike, owing to the range and up-to-dateness of his information on international relations. His knowledge is largely derived from travel and residence abroad. Thus, he spent several years in Turkey, attached in a military capacity to the British embassy at Constantinople, and availed himself of the opportunity offered there of exploring the Sultan's possessions, in Europe and in Asia, describing his experiences in a book entitled "Through Five Turkish Provinces." Another of his books, also the result of travel and exploration, is "The U. I. Islam."

Sir Mark has also visited Central Asia, British East Africa, Russia from one end to the other, Morocco, Tripoli and China, and, possessed of keen powers of perception and of humor, is usually able to relate in an entertaining and interesting fashion things about these countries and their people, not known to the generality of the public. He holds the rank of Lieutenant-colonel, and served through the Boer War as captain with such distinction as to win from Lord Kitchener the post of secretary of George Wyndham when the latter was Secretary for Ireland in the last Conservative administration. He is a frequent and refreshing contributor to the London Saturday Review, invariably about foreign matters, and is married to Edith Gerst, daughter of Sir John Gerst, and sister of the late Sir Eldon Gerst, who preceded Lord Kitchener as British plenipotentiary in Egypt.

Sir Mark is very gifted, paints and sketches with skill, and unites, with much musical talent, a marvelous memory. For instance, he will go to the theatre to hear a musical comedy for the first time, and, on returning home, will sit down to the piano with a note of music, and play all the songs that he has just heard. A Conservative in politics, he is slated for high office on the return to power of the Unionist party, when he will undoubtedly receive the appointment of Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs. Indeed, it is by no means impossible that he may be entrusted with the portfolio of minister of that department, in succession to Sir Edward Grey.

The Sykeses are of Cumberland origin. The fortunes of the family were, however, laid by ancestors who were in business at Leeds and Hull in the sixteenth century, and Richard Sykes, merchant, was wealthy enough to purchase the manor of Leeds from the crown in 1625. Sledmere, now the principal country seat of Sir Mark Sykes, and famous for the racing stud maintained there by his father, the late Sir Tatton Sykes, a stud which produced more than one Derby winner, came into the possession of the Sykes family through the marriage in 1704 of Richard Sykes to the daughter and heiress of Mark Kirkby, of Sledmere, a descendant of the ancient Cumberland family of Kirkby, of Kirkby Trelouth. The son of this union, who was named Mark, after his maternal grandfather, was created a baronet in 1752, by reason of the great political influence which he derived from his extensive estates. For the last 150 years there has always been a Sykes in the House of Commons, and the present Sir Mark continues the family tradition.

Thus, Sir Mark has shown no interest in the turf, and it is quite possible that he may dispose of the famous racing stud at Sledmere. Perhaps he may be prompted thereto by the attitude of the Jockey Club towards his father. For although Sir Mark spent an enormous amount of money towards the support of horse-racing, his colors being conspicuous on all the great race courses of England for over sixty years, yet the Jockey Club always kept its doors closed against him, largely, it is true, owing to his disputatious character in matters connected with racing. He had quite a number of lawsuits with racing men, and with members of the Jockey Club, one of the most sensational affairs of this kind being against Lord Marquis Beresford, in connection with the purchase of the famous race horse La Fleche, at the sale of the stable of the late Baron Hirsch.

One of the best known and most popular members of the Sykes family was the late Christopher Sykes, younger brother of Sir Tatton, and perhaps the most intimate personal friend of King Edward and Queen Alexandra before their accession to the throne. Influenced by the army, had been invited, and he was in London when the Queen Alexandra was wont to dine. Christopher Sykes was the soul of good nature, and as such was a frequent part of practical jokes, which he always took in good part, sometimes getting even with the perpetrator.

Thus, on one occasion while staying at a country house to which the old Duke of Cambridge, then commander-in-chief of the army, had been invited, Christopher was persuaded by his friend Henry Chaplin, former Secretary of Agriculture, that it would be the proper thing for him to don his militia uniform in honor of the advent of the generalissimo. As soon as the duke arrived and saw Col. Sykes, thus arrayed, he asked him angrily, what in the name of sulphur he meant by this "masquerade." Quick as lightning, Sykes sprang upon the broad back of Chaplin, who was conveniently bent forward with laughter, and exclaimed, "Sir, behold your servant riding upon an ass!" Then the laughter was general, in which the duke joined, his ire being dispelled.

The numerous eccentricities of the late Sir Tatton Sykes and of his clever wife would fill a volume. They differed on almost every subject. Indeed, the only time that they ever were of one mind was when about eight years ago they agreed to separate. They were in constant litigation with one another, while living under the same roof, and although seated at the same table at breakfast, luncheon and dinner, it was quite usual, indeed, for Sir Tatton and Lady Sykes, after breakfasting together, to drive down in the same victoria brougham to the law courts in order to take part in the suits and counter-suits which they were bringing against each other. They would lunch together in the middle of the day, during the recess, and in the evening, after having fought one another all day long in the law courts, would drive home together, tete-a-tete, and enter into a large party of complaints at dinner. They would complain that she had no business sense, while she described him on the witness stand as "an old dear," who was "so odd in his views" that there was only one person in the world who could understand him, and make allowances for him, namely, herself.

Perhaps the greatest token of his love for Greece given by King George during his fifty years of reign, was that country was when he gave a commentary directions that his body should sleep its last rest on Grecian soil, instead of being taken back to his native land in Denmark. He lies in a beautiful tomb placed in the churchyard of a little Byzantine chapel in the woods of his picturesque country seat of Tatol, up in the hills about eight miles from Athens, and, the concluding portion of the obsequies took place according to Lutherau rites, very simply and quietly, in the presence of only the immediate members of the family, and of a few old and faithful retainers, all on an and ceremony having been restricted to the state funeral at Athens. Up there at Tatol the King rests, his tomb shaded by grand old cypresses and cedar trees, far away from the noise of the town, in the silence of the forest, and yet so that when standing beside the grave there is the most beautiful view of the sea and of the islands in the distance.

CHILD STRUCK BY TRAIN AND INSTANTLY KILLED

Danville, Va., May 9.--Annie Maude Wright, the three-year-old daughter of James Wright, of Pelham, while playing with a doll seated on a cross tie on Pelham on Thursday evening, failed to see or hear the approach of a freight train which came around a sharp curve. The child was instantly killed, although desperate efforts were made by the engineer to avert the accident. The child's nurse was picking up coal along the track near-by at the time.

EDITOR CONVICTED OF CRIMINAL LIBEL

Sentenced by Trial Justice to Serve Six Months on Chain-Gang, but Takes Appeal.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.] Elizabeth City, N. C., May 9.--W. O. Saunders, editor of the Independent, a newspaper published here, was convicted of criminal libel this morning in trial justice's court and was sentenced by Judge R. W. Turner to six months on the county chain-gang. The defendant's attorneys served notice of appeal, and bail was given for Mr. Saunders's appearance at the September term of Superior Court, when the case will be tried again.

The trial this morning is the result of an article that was published in the Independent several weeks ago making statements concerning Mr. Aydtlett, which Mr. Aydtlett alleges are libelous and defamatory. He made demands upon the Independent to retract these statements and Mr. Saunders refused to do so, and challenged Mr. Aydtlett to have him arrested.

This morning Mr. Aydtlett swore out a warrant against Mr. Saunders, charging him with criminal libel, and it was served by Chief of Police Thomas.

Mr. Aydtlett was the only witness that appeared in the trial to-day. He was on the stand for several hours. Attorney H. S. Ward and ex-Judge J. B. Leigh prosecuted for the State, and Attorneys I. M. Meekins and W. L. Cohoon defended Mr. Saunders.
